Rebellion on the Rampage.

The following article is copied from the New York Sun, an independent paper in political matters, and for this reason it will be of great interest to our readers. The flood-gates of violence are being opened upon us again, all through the South, and it seems that brute force is to be made to balance the books against the moral influence and force of the great majority of the American people throughout the country. When the war closed the rebels were conquered, and they were satisfied to receive such terms as might be offered them. They would have been contented to have given their allegiance to the Government of the United States, if that Government in all of its branches had required it of them, emphatically. Position after position has been yielded by the Executive until the unrepentant rebels have forgotten the chastisement that has been given them, and they in turn insult the power that spared their lives and property. Here is what the Sun says:

The Southern rebels, unmindful of the fact that they owe their lives and retention of what little property their own suicidal folly has left them to the unparalleled clemency of their conquerors, seem bent on proving to the world that they are undeserving of their good fortune, and that they ought to have been treated with a small portion, at least, of that rigor which, in every civilized country but ours, is thought to be the desert of treason. Not content with murdering private citizens, whose loyalty and patriotism rebuke their own crimes, and whose willingness to assist in restoring to order the chaos that succeeded the downfall of the Confederacy has provoked their hatred, they have grown bold enough to begin again those acts of piracy which have given to Semmes and Braine such infamous notoriety. A steamer, loaded with arms and ammunition destined for the Government of the State of Arkansas, has been seized on the great highway of the Mississippi river, by a band of desperadoes, and her lading destroyed. The outrage was committed openly, and without any attempt at concealing the identity of those engaged in it. No doubt it is considered among the unrepentant rebels of the neighborhood as a praiseworthy achievement.

The purpose of this piratical exploit is evidently to cripple the State Government in any efforts it may make to protect the loyal inhabitants of Arkansas against their enemies, or to enforce the laws which interfere with the sovereign will and pleasure of the rebel population. It is a bold defiance to the National Government, too; for it threatens a similar treatment to the arms and ammunition of the United States troops whenever they shall be sent into Arkansas to maintain the national authority. If there were a doubt left in any sane man's mind of the nature and feelings which animate a large portion of the Southern people, it must be dispelled now. The rebellion is still smouldering, and only awaits a fitting opportunity to burst out into a flame which would envelop the whole country, if it could.

Much, if not all, of this prolongation of a contest which, according to every rule of common sense, should have been ended three years ago, is due to the unpatriotic course which many influential public men have taken. Instead of co-operating in the permanent restoration of peace according to true Democratic principles, they have persistently maintained an attitude of friendship for the rebels and hostility to the restoration of the national power. To crown their folly, they have nominated, as candidate for Vice-President, a man previously pledged to forcibly undo what little has been accomplished towards rebuilding the ruins left by the rebellion, and to once more put the disloyal element of the South in the ascendency. If language means anything, Mr. Blair's language means that if he and Mr. Seymour succeed at the approaching election some of the most important results of the victories of our arms shall be swept away, and everything of which their reason has now deprived them be given back to the rebels. There can be no question that the hope of such a result lies at the bottom of these outrages at the South, of which we have, unhappily, to chronicle so many, and that it keeps alive the passions which burned so fiercely during the war.

JOINT RESOLUTION.

From the Senate, for a joint assembly for completing the election of U. S. Senator to-morrow, at 12 o'clock; concurred in.

ELECTION OF UNITED STATES SENATOR.

At half past 11 o'clock, the Speaker directed the House to the election of U. S. Senator, to serve this State in the Congress of the United States, for the term of six years from the 4th of March next, and directed the members to rise in their seats as their names were called and name the person they would elect for U. S. Senator.

Mr. Miner, of Manchester, nominated as a candidate for Senator, Hon. Geo. F. Edmunds, of Burlington, and said:

I do not deem it necessary, but it is highly proper to make a nomination to this House for this highest and most important official position in the gift of the people of this State.

On the death of our lamented and much loved Senator Foot, the Governor appointed to fill the vacancy thus created, our then distinguished fellow-citizen, the Hon. Geo. F. Edmunds, of Burlington, who immediately took his place in that exalted body, the Senate of the United States.

When the Legislature assembled in October, 1866, there were three U. S. Senators to be elected,—one for the full term, and two to fill the vacancies occasioned by the deaths of Senators Collamer and Foot.

Without any caucus nominations—without any names being presented in this House—and, as I believe, without any consultation, Senator Morrill, Judge Poland, and Mr. Edmunds, were severally unanimously elected by the Republicans of both Houses of this Legislature.

I think I may safely say that the Legislature and the people of this enlightened State had great confidence in Mr. Edmunds, and high expectations from his election.

Certainly, sir, such was my trust, and I may now well say that our highest hopes have been fully realized. I have yet to learn that he has ever given a vote, or performed an act, as Senator, which has not been in full accord with his constituents.

His ability and fidelity are adding a brighter luster to the proud emblems which Vermont occupies in the sisterhood of States.

I therefore present his name for reelection, and trust that he will receive the votes of all in this body who love the Union of these States, and who would preserve this noble Government—the rich heritage left us by our fathers.

Mr. Converse, of Woodstock, expressed his admiration of Mr. Edmunds, who stood a peer in the highest and most dignified legislative body in the United States.

Mr. Bishop, of Bolton, nominated Hon. Timothy P. Redfield.

The roll having been called, it appeared that Hon. Geo. F. Edmunds had received 188 votes; Hon. Timothy P. Redfield had received 11 votes; and thereupon the Speaker announced that

HON. GEO. F. EDMUNDS, having received a majority of all the votes cast, is duly elected, on the part of this House, United States Senator for the term of six years from the 4th of March next.

On motion of Mr. Miner, of Manchester—adjourned.

The Chronicle of the Times.

The Feast of the Husbandmen—They wait for the Return of the Messengers from the Province of the Quakers—A great Strife rageth concerning who shall be Chief Ruler.

And it came to pass in these days that the Province of the Green Mountains laughed with the harvest of the husbandman and was glad with the fatness of his flocks and the fullness of his barns.

2. And peace and plenty were abroad in that land covering it as with a garment from the Strawberry Bank by the sea unto Coos which is over against the Province of the Kennucks.

3. Wherefore proclamation went forth unto all the people saying, Bring ye of your fruits and your flocks and your handiwork, up to the cities and chief places.

4. That it may be seen and known of men, where fatness most aboundeth and where the skill of cunning men and women most obtaineth.

5. And the people went up even as they were desired, bearing of their increase.

6. So that the inns and houses of the cities would scarce contain them all, for their name was Legion.

7. But when the feasts of the husbandmen were ended, the people returned with one accord unto their homes.

8. Waiting to see what reports should come from the Quaker Province which is over against Jarsee, and from the Buckeye Province, which is rich in horses and lands, and from the home of the Hoosier, which is in—Diana.

9. For the Tammanecties had sent messengers unto these provinces, even as they did unto the Pine Tree Province.

10. If peradventure they might seduce them to the following after Semore the Rioter, and Jeph the Repudiator.

11. And they went forth clad in the armor of desperation, and bound round about with a girdle of despair, bearing much scrip, and abounding in soft words.

12. And they wrought diligently in season and out of season, sowing neither pains nor scrip nor lies, nor soft words.

13. For these provinces were very great, and much people lived therein, so that they had much to say concerning the Chief Ruler, and as their voice, so was the voice of the nation.

14. Wherefore, the Dimmicrats said, one to another, Except the Buckeyes and the Hoosiers, with the Quakers also, shall hear us and believe our report, we shall all likewise perish.

15. For verily the other provinces which be not rebels have declared a trust us, and will have none of us, neither us nor our doctrines.

16. Wherefore it becometh us to strive, as man striveth for his life, lest these too cast us off.

17. And there be neither power, nor pilferings, nor plottings left unto us, neither concubines for our comfort, nor whisky for our thirst, nor clothes for our nakedness, except we pay for them with scrip.

18. And they strove.

19. But the Republicans also reasoned one with another, saying.

20. It only lacketh that these provinces should stand by us, that these fellows which he called Dimmicrats go straight-way and hang themselves, even as did that Dimmicrat of old.

21. Therefore let us strive that the world be rid of them now and forever.

22. And they strove.

23. Wherefore the fight was fierce and commotion was great in all that country.

24. And the people of the Province of the Green Mountains, waited watching as it is written.—Manchester Mirror.

Twenty-five Years Practice

In the Treatment of Diseases incident to Females, has placed Dr. Dow at the head of all the physicians making such practice a specialty, and enables him to guarantee a speedy and permanent cure in the worst cases of Suppression and all other Menstrual Derangements, from whatever cause. All letters for advice must contain $1. Office, No. 9 Endicott Street, Boston.

When revisiting the causes of these distressing complaints, it is most painful to contemplate the attendant evils consequent upon them. It is but simple justice to the subject to enumerate a few of the many additional causes which so largely affect the life, health, and happiness of woman in all classes of society, and which, consequently, affect more or less directly, the welfare of the entire human family. The mania that exists for precocious education and marriage, causes the years that nature designed for corporeal development, to be wasted and perverted in the restraints of dress, the early confinement of school, and especially in the unhealthy excitement of the ball-room. Thus, with the body half-clothed, and the mind unduly excited by pleasure, perverting in midnight rest the hours of sleep, and the work of destruction is half accomplished.

In consequence of this early strain upon her system, unnecessary effort is required by the delicate votary to retain her situation in school, and the result is a nervous prostration, which, once excited, is never again to be subdued. The work of destruction is half accomplished.

WOMAN.

FEMALES, OWING TO THE PECULIAR and insupportable relation which they sustain, their peculiar organization, and the offices they perform, are subject to many sufferings. Freedom from these contribute in no small degree to their happiness and welfare, for none can be happy who are ill. Not only so, but no one of these various female complaints can long be suffered to run on without involving the general health of the individual, and ere long producing permanent sickness and premature decline. Nor is it pleasant to consult a physician for the relief of these various female ailments, and only upon the most urgent necessity will a true woman so far sacrifice her greatest charm as to do this. The sex will then thank us for placing in their hands simple specifics which will be found efficacious in relieving and curing almost every one of those troublesome complaints peculiar to the sex.

HELMOLD'S EXTRACT OF BARK.—Hundreds suffer in silence, and hundreds
